Luella Larsen And Sailor Husband To Live At Coast

A pretty fall wedding was solemnized on October, 2nd at the home of Mrs. Anne Larsen, when her daughter, Luella, became the bride of Richard Wesley Harrison, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Harrison of Magrath, Alta.

Bishop J. G. Snow of the Raymond Fourth Ward of the L. D. S. Church officiated at the double ring ceremony. The house was tastefully decorated with pink and white streamers and bouquets of fall flowers. The three tiered wedding cake was flanked on either side by tall pink candles.

The bride was lovely in a ballerina length white nylon net over satin gown, with an over jacket of lace with round collar little self covered button and long lilly point sleeves. Her full length veil misted from a crown type coronet with clusters of seed pearls. She carried a bouquet of red roses and white baby mums.

Camille Larsen in a deep mauve net over taffeta gown was her sister's maid of honor, while Dorothy Renchler of Edmonton in a gown of yellow net and lace over taffeta, was bridesmaid. Each wore matching veils and carried bouquets of mauve and white and yellow and white mums.

Little Debbie Deglow, of Magrath and Karen Harrison, neices of the groom, were charming little flower-girls in matching gowns and bonnets of pink corded taffeta. Each carried colonial bouquets of mums and asters. Merlin Harrison of Magrath was his brothers best - man and Morris Dahl was the usher.

TRUE IN 1865 ... STILL TRUE TODAY

"You cannot bring about prosperity by discouraging thrift."
 "You cannot strengthen the weak by weakening the strong."
 "You cannot help little men by tearing down big men."
 "You cannot help the wage earner by pulling down the wage payer."
 "You cannot build character and courage by taking away man's initiative and independence."
 "You cannot further the brotherhood of man by encouraging class hatred."
 "You cannot help the poor by destroying the rich."
 "You cannot establish sound security on borrowed money."
 "You cannot keep out of trouble by spending more than you earn."
 "You cannot help men permanently by doing for them what they could and should do for themselves."
 —A. Lincoln.

"And when were you born?" asked the sergeant, taking the particulars of a recruit.

"December, 1934," answered the recruit.

"Ah," mused the sergeant, "don't I remember that winter! It was bitterly cold."

"Cold," echoed the recruit. "I'll say it was cold. Why, I was brought by a penguin—the stork couldn't make it."

We have so much to protect

This Canada of ours — is ours to enjoy at a price — the price of constant alertness.

We cannot take for granted our freedom to worship, to vote, to educate our children, or to order our home life as we please. All these freedoms are ours only as long as we are willing to do everything necessary to maintain and defend them.

All honour then to the Canadian Soldier — the steadfast guardian of all our free institutions. Without men like him, the Canada we love might cease to be.

We have so much to protect. Let us all do our part, without let-up, whatever way our duty lies.

FIRST ANNIVERSARY

By Mary L. Bowles

VERA DANSE centered the tiny Dresden dancing girl in the bowl of violets. Gilbert was already an hour late. She had almost dialed the gift shop several times. She had not done so, because she was afraid that Maureen would answer and call Gilbert to the telephone. Yet Maureen, as Gilbert's assistant, had a right to answer. She and Gilbert often worked late checking merchandise. But not tonight—the celebration of the first anniversary of their wedding.

As she had many times before, Vera thought how different she and Maureen were in temperament and appearance. Vera was fair and small and chose pastel shades in clothes which she accented with fragile jewelry. Maureen was a tall woman who wore rich colors or black with only a gold clip or large gold earrings.

Vera thought of her first meeting with Gilbert over two years ago. She had strayed into a gift shop on Wabash Avenue. A tall, deeply tanned man had come forward to meet her. She hardly realized what she had bought. After that she returned to the shop many times. One bright October day Gilbert asked her to dinner.

One day Vera had been browsing about the shop, when Gilbert pointed to two figurines he had just unpacked. The tiny figures looked like fugitives from the ballet. "Gifts for the ladies," he had said. He handed the girl to Vera and the boy to Maureen.

"They're lovely," Vera remembered saying, "but is it right to part them? I'm sure they're lovers."

"Perhaps they'll get back together," Maureen had said.

Several months later Gilbert and Vera had been married. Their home had been set up in Gilbert's apartment on the North Side. Every time she dusted the figurine, she had a shamed desire for its dancing mate.

Now alone on the first anniversary of their wedding, she could stand the room no longer. She decided to drive to the shop.

Ashamed, yet determined, she decided to see if Gilbert was at Maureen's apartment. She hurried to the apartment hotel. The elevator could not carry her fast enough to the sixteenth floor. She knocked at Maureen's door.

"Come in," Maureen called faintly.

"It's Vera," the visitor said.

"I'll be out in a minute," Maureen called from the bathroom.

Vera dropped into the nearest chair. The dressing table was bare. The desk and book shelves were empty. On the bed was an open suitcase, filled with lingerie. In one corner stood a wardrobe trunk, its racks crowded with summer dresses.

The evidence of flight coupled with Gilbert's lateness filled her with unreasoning dread.

Maureen entered. Her scarlet robe seemed to drain all the color from her face. Smiling unsteadily, she stretched out on the bed and adjusted a pillow under her head. With an effort she spoke, "I suppose Gilbert has told you."

"Why... no... no..." stammered Vera.

"It's hard to tell," Maureen continued. "I dread putting it in words... but I might as well confess. I'm a sick woman. Asthma and sinus infection have joined forces to drive me out of Chicago. I'm leaving for Tucson tonight. Gilbert insisted on picking up my reservation. He said you would understand."

"I'm sorry," Vera murmured.

"You just missed Gilbert. He was in such a hurry, I forgot to give him your anniversary present."

She picked up the package on the bed and handed it to Vera. Beneath the layers of tissue paper she found the figurine... the partner of her ballet dancer. Perhaps it would be symbolic—the lovers would truly be together at last.

"What model is your car?"
 "This car ain't no model — it's a horrible example."

WHO GOES TO SCHOOL IN ALBERTA

We in Alberta believe that education, tailored to their needs and interests, and measured according to their various talents, is the right of all our children. The school must reach them all, and develop in each one the best of skill and wisdom that he can attain. We owe this debt to those who live in the forest and on the range, to those who live 40 miles from town, to the very dull, to the very bright, to the crippled and the deaf, as well as to the children who play next door.

We owe them training as workers or as scholars, each according to his will and capacity - and training, too, as future citizens, able and apt to share in the fellowship and public life of their community and responsive to its needs. That is what we mean, in Alberta, by equal opportunity for all our children.

Can this be done? Albertans believe that it can - but there are many obstacles to overcome. Alberta is a land of vast distances and sparse population. The population is smaller than British Columbia, for example, but because of its distribution Alberta has twice as many schools. There are inequalities, numerous and varied, but the Alberta Department of Education has taken vigorous measures to eliminate these.

It has extended and enriched the learning program in remote areas through more adequate supervision and guidance, through correspondence courses, audio-visual aids, and school broadcasts. It has given assistance, where necessary, in centralization of schools in rural areas and in the substantial increase in school transport. Nearly half the number of rural children now travel by bus to modern, centralized schools. But most of all, increased building and operational grants, paid directly to school divisions and districts, and the equalization grants, allocated according to local need, have brought about a "new look" in rural education.

The equalization grant, based on assessment per classroom, is a device responsive to the need of school divisions and districts. If local resources, as measured by assessment, are high, then the equalization grant is low; if local assessment is low, then the equalization grant is relatively high. For example the assessment of Camrose School Division is approximately $97,468 per classroom while in the Lac Biche School Division it is only $26,787. Equalization grants compensate for this disparity.

In 1953 the Camrose School Division received a grant of $80,425.09, approximately $30 per pupil, while the Lac Biche Division received $138,623.74, about $80 per pupil. Equalization and operational grants from the Department of Education paid in these cases 36 percent of the cost of Education in Camrose and 77 percent in Lac Biche.

A modern and efficient school program requires a modern and efficient school plant. The Alberta Government, through its building grants, advisory services, assistance in marketing debentures, and guarantee of interest, has provided effective leadership in this program of post-war school expansion. In 1945, the value of rural school plant and equipment in Alberta was less than $11,000,000. Today it is close to $40,000,000.

In 1952, 852 school units were under construction in Alberta, at an estimated cost of $25,000,000. More than 500 of these provide improved accommodation for children who live in rural areas. There are 750 more classrooms in Alberta than at the end of World War II, but there are nearly 900 less one-roomed schools; and of these additional classrooms, more than two thirds are high school grades.

Saving money... and writing cheques

A bank offers you two types of deposit account, Savings and Current.

If your main purpose is to save, to accumulate funds, it's good to have a Savings account.

If you write cheques frequently, you will like the many advantages of a Current account.

The money you leave in a Savings account earns interest, and your bank book gives you an up-to-date, continuing record of your financial progress. If your funds are active, with frequent deposits and withdrawals, a Current account provides a special service; a monthly statement, together with your cancelled cheques—useful as receipts and a ready reference for budgeting, bookkeeping and other purposes.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE FOR EDUCATION IN ALBERTA

Who is responsible for Education in Alberta? Does the B. N. A. Act require the Province to establish and finance schools? Many people firmly believe that such is the case. They are convinced that the Province is required to provide for the education of the young people, and therefore should underwrite the cost of such an undertaking. In effect, however, the B. N. A. Act states that the federal government may not control education; its control must be left to the people of each province to exercise as they see fit. It is up to the people of Alberta to decide whether education is to be a matter for local, or for provincial control, or partly one and partly the other.

In practise the Alberta Government has adopted a middle course. With such statute as the Department of Education Act and the School Act, the legislature has created a Department of Education, with its Minister, on whom certain powers and duties are These include responsibility for the preparation of courses of study, the selection of text books, the certification of teachers, the preparation and marking of departmental examinations, and the provision of certain supplementary educational services. The Legislature, following long Canadian tradition, has also created local school authorities (divisional, district, and county boards), to whom it has delegated certain duties and given certain powers. In general, school boards are expected to provide and equip school buildings, to maintain them in operating condition, to appoint teachers and other employees, to provide transportation for pupils as needed, to requisition from municipal authorities much or most of the money needed for these services.

But whether the Minister of Education is approving the choice of a new text-book, or a local trustee is investigating a leaky school roof, it must never be forgotten that each is performing his function on behalf of the people he represents. The power they exercise is wielded as stewards for their fellow citizens. Thus, there appears the unavoidable conclusion that all adult citizens of Alberta are responsible for education. And from this, it follows that the quality of education depends, at least in part, on how well and conscientiously Alberta citizens perform the duties which civic responsibility demands.

Why should any person be responsible for the education of any children other than his own? The answer, of course, is that a modern democratic people, for its continued existence as such, must be founded on an intelligent and informed electorate, on people who understand the meaning of democracy and who have the will, the energy, and the skills to put its principles into practice, and to make the best possible contribution to the welfare of the community. In other words, democracy cannot continue to exist if a large part of the population are ignorant of or indifferent to their democratic rights and duties. Thus is established a fundamental principle in Alberta education; one of its purposes is to train all boys and girls to become effective citizens of our Province and our country.

Servide has been the motivating force of the Alberta Wheat Pool since its inception 31 years ago. Built on this sound foundation the organization has been outstandingly useful to Alberta's grain producers and has made steady growth.

Today the Alberta Wheat Pool operates a system of 507 country elevators and has terminals at Vancouver and Port Arthur, all owned by Alberta's grain producers.

Besides giving producers equalled services and protection, the Pool's financial accomplishments on their behalf have been substantial. From the initial investment of $8½ million made by members in the early years of the organization, the following has been achieved.

Paid cash patronage dividends	$6,250,000
Purchased reserves in cash	9,140,000
Paid interests on reserves (1923-29)	630,000
Aquired property at a cost of	18,200,000
Built up a working capital of	4,800,000
Repaid, with interest, 1929 overpayment ..	8,700,000

The record of the Alberta Wheat Pool is one of which grain producers who are the owners of the organization may be justly proud. The Alberta Wheat Pool organization has proven that it is worthy of the continued loyalty of Alberta farmers.
